A New Type of Web-Log, For Me Anyway

I've never seen web-logs like this before in past years, I've gotten records that show which files were visited, and when, but I've never before seen how the visitor found the site, nor what their query was.

But in the recent move to this new <http://imagine9.com> site, the accompanying web-logs provided by my web-site ISP do provide this additional information.

I didn't quite know what to make of the code lines at first, but after a while, I did figure out how to cull what seems to be the relevant information for my purposes.

Codes and Privacy

The Code lines come in, in this form:

66.67.116.25 - - [20/May/2002:09:16:41 -0700] "GET /compons.htm HTTP/1.1" 200 194224 "http://google.yahoo.com/bin/query?p=defination+of+paradigm+shift&hc=0&hs=0" "Mozilla/4.0 (compatible; MSIE 5.5; Windows 95)" 66-67-116-25.twcny.rr.com com.rr.twcny.66-67-116-25 1 OK

And I've worked out some word processing macros that throw them into this form:

Date	isp server	Place Name	File Accessed	Query	Referral Source
1. 20/May:09:16:41	twcny.rr.com	Minneapolis	Components	defination of paradigm shift	google.yahoo

I presume that the search service, includes the query in the log-record, in order to help site-masters fine-tune their pages, so as to make it easier for the public generally to find the information that they're looking for.

I don't think there are any privacy issues involved, as this sort of log record only shows that the visitor is any one of millions of people.

It doesn't give you a picture of individuals, but rather it gives you a picture of general ideas being sought, and what sort of idea match-ups are attempted with one's site.

And the place name is helpful; it is a pretty far away metaphor for an individual, but it does, somehow, help 'map' the remark, in some way, in one's mind.

I mean, I do, well, sort of, understand that, for example, the above mentioned visit does not necessarily indicate that every single person in the entire 100-million person American Midwest is keenly focused on this particular subject, but even so, the place name does seem to give some vague grounding or other, for the remark.

But anyway, I don't get any individual information, at all, nor do I seek it.

I certainly do encourage people to use search services that forward the queries. It certainly is very helpful for me to know what people generally have on their mind, when they're finding my site. Among other things, I presume that, over time, it will help in figuring out what to write about in the first place.

Perhaps I should also mention that I have deleted, for the purposes of this list, a rare few entries that contain certain information, ie. a girl's full name in the isp-server name, or a query that contains some vulgarity or other, or a volatile query, say, to the Family Journals from some small company ISP, or something directed at me personally, or something like that. These came to about 5 per 1,000, about half-a-percent of the total.

While I have nothing but contempt for the general concept of privacy, as a political matter, I certainly do, very very much, absolutely respect an individual's privacy, as an individual matter, and especially as a personal matter.

Frequency, Over The Years

As mentioned in an earlier note, visits to this site over the years numbered, in per-day / per-month terms, about:

7 / 200 in 1995 and 1996
12 / 300 in 1997
17 / 500 in 1998
25 / 800 in 1999
35 / 1,200 in 2000
and about 40 - 50 a day, approaching 1,500 a month in 2001.

The grand total, for the seven years, 1995 to 2002, has been, I suppose, about 40, or 50 thousand. I guess it adds up over time.

However, in mid-December of 2001, the logs at the slip.net site stopped being recorded, and then the site went off altogether for days and more on end, over months, and after mid-December, I have no further log records for the slip.net site, so I don't really know what has been going on with it.

In the current 2002 period, at the new imaginenine.com site, the frequency has been about, again, in per-day / per-month terms:

January --- 6 / 200;
February --- 12 / 400;
March --- 12 / 400;
April --- 25 / 700;
and, finally, in May, about 40 or so per day, about 1,200 per month.

So it took about four months for the quantity of traffic to, well, almost, recover.

More Bibliography Visits, But Less Text Visits

There is a substantial difference in the type of visits though, coming into the new site at imaginenine.com, from the ones that had been visiting the same files at the slip.net/~neilrm location.

Previously, the major text files: "Schema", the "Cognition Summary", "Elections 2000", "Silver Locket", and a couple of others, were each getting from 50 to 100 visits a month - now that's down to ten percent of what it was.

"Neandertal" too is down to about half its previous volume.

Even the the "Flying Blind" paper, ('Mao and Al' in the lists here), and the text-laden html Bibliography, which between them were getting hundreds of visits a month, are now getting just a few dozen.

Now, as many as two-thirds of visitors are being referred to the bibliographies, especially the big *.pdf bibliographies, and far fewer to the text files

It pleases me enormously that the bibliographies are being seen, I certainly can't complain about that; I am hugely proud of them, and hope that they are very useful, and it's wonderful that they're being seen more than they were.

But the heart of the site is really the text files, and the main text files are apparently no longer appearing in the search engine lists, or at least, not very much.

Search Services, Web-Spiders, and Cataloging Robots

Although I have not included web-robots in the list below, I have noticed that, previously, there were about twenty different web-robot companies roaming my site, each several times a week, all together calling out thousands of files per month. Now that twenty is down to about six or seven.

So I must presume that, except for Inktomi, Google, Alta-Vista, Alexa, Jeeves, occassionally Lycos, and a couple of European search engine companies, the French and the Poles in particular (for some reason), except for those, this new imaginine.com location has not yet been found.

The Japanese, the British, the Germans, the Portugese, and some of the apparently more intellectually oriented New England, Los Angeles, Texas, and Seattle web-cataloging services among others, which were previously daily visitors over the past five years, seem to have disappeared, or have not reappeared.

Presumably, it was those engines that were referring queries to the text files in particular, although I don't really know for sure about how these things work. Maybe the data-bases at the standard services, just haven't adjusted yet. Again, I really don't know about these things.

And regular visits from *.gov, *.mil, and *.k12 isp's, all of which I particularly look forward to, are unfortunately way down as well, ten or twenty percent of what they were.

Queries

Anyway, below, are the web-logs for the first four weeks in May, when the site-traffic finally began to again approach the amount it had been up to last December.

This list does NOT include the five or six web-spiders and robots that currently roam the site each day, but includes only what appears to be human visits.

I've organized the visits by my best guess as to query relevance.

The query itself is listed in the second column from the right side of the page.

Date	isp server	Place Name	File Accessed	Query	Referral Source
1. 22/May:09:14:24	dial.xnet.ro	Romania	Components	nothing lasts forever-good or bad	google
2. 15/May:11:41:48	cs-austin.rr.com	Texas	300 Books.pdf	'David Berenson'	google
3. 06/May:10:46:42	dhcp.clarion.edu	University	Books One	Summary of 'the structure of scientific revolutions	google.yahoo
4. 17/May:19:21:41	NotFound		Liking and Weeping	shakespere autobiography	google.yahoo
5. 11/May:07:41:39	NotFound		Mao and AI

Blue, the first section, and accounting for about one third of the query reports (200 of 600), indicates that it looks to me like the person found a file of mine that contained primary text material relating directly to their request, or something very close a 'direct hit' so to speak.

Green, the second section, another third or so, indicates that it looks to me like the visitor found at least a full citation accompanied by similar materials, either by the same author, or on the same or a similar subject, or something close of that nature. Some sort of direct lead. Not all of course, but a likely probability.

Purple, the third section, another quarter of the queried visits, means, in general, that while the visitor found a reference to their query, there was substantial text material at a different file at the site, which they missed.

And grey italic, the fourth section, means that it appears to me that the file found was a bit off the mark of their specific query. These accounted for about fifteen percent of the queried hits.

(blank) In the fifth section (with a blank query field), which was about forty percent of the total visits, 400 of the 1,000, are the records of visits that came in with no reference to query at all, leaving no clues as to how they found the files, or why they might have been interested.

Summary

Thus, it looks like, for the first four weeks in May, just counting those visits where the query was recorded,

About a third of the queried visits, came to files with unique text material directly relating to their query.

Another half came to files that had at least a relevant full citation surrounded by closely related contextual material.

And about a fifth came to files that seems far fetched from their query, but I suppose, you never know what the visitor might wind up finding fascinating in one way or another.

High School

In general, it seems that a high proportion of people visiting the site during this time, come in looking for some standard information about some generally known matter, a report they were writing for school, or something like that.

The teacher in me, of course, loves that, especially when they hit on a file with some relevant text material.

But the queries I most look forward to, are the ones related to high level human problem solving - medicine, or politics, or philosophy, or judicial matters, or historical theory, or education, or sociology, or child health, or human rights, or law, or psychiatry, or women's issues or something like that - people that want to know "why", and how large scale matters are to be dealt with.

It's that sort of interest that makes me feel like I'm making some sort of progress. But those sorts of inquires seem to be in the minority, and I suspect, are way down from what was coming in before the site change.

Ten Thousand Where Have I Heard That Number Before?

In the end though, there is something that I noticed, that I'd previously had no picture of at all.

In the one-thousand consecutive visits during May of 2002 which are listed here, there were six hundred which showed the queries.

Of those six hundred, there were two hundred (the ones in Blue) where the person had their query directly, well more or less, directly answered, one-third of the visits for which there were query records.

And these weren't queries regarding "known elsewhere" matters, not like, 'what date was George Washington born on?'. A lot of them are more in the realm of "social systems", even 'overall' systems type questions.

Anyway, 200 'direct hits to text', out of the 600 queries, means, perhaps, 15,000 on-target, text-material answers, out of 50,000 total visits over the seven years that this site has been open.

Maybe higher, considering that previously, there was a higher proportion of text files being accessed.

But even if just looking at the ten thousand closest matches, well, at least ten thousand persons got their 'systems' type questions directly answered, or at least, pretty directly spoken to.

Ten thousand. I just didn't know that. Before this, I didn't have any idea of what was going on with visits to my site, really.

When A Single Answer Facilitates The Finding Of A Thousand Others, Then, In That Case, One Answer Is Better Than A Thousand.

The point of the site, though, is not really to answer all the questions one at a time.

The point of the site, is to facilitate the presentation of "The Logical Types and Logical Levels System © nrm 1983", which, in turn, is designed to facilitate the finding of accurate, relevant, helpful answers to all such questions and queries, by the millions, and more important, do it Neil or no Neil.

To solicit facilitation of an intact, in context, public presentation of the "Logical Types and Logical Levels System © nrm" is really what this site is all about.

(Incidentally, the © nrm is always included, as it is the only way I know of to keep the math system intact and in context.

(In addition to the math constraints, which are built into the system, I'm hoping the '© nrm' at all times, will add legal constraints as well, against any attempts to rip the math symbols out of the overall, "geared-for-work-out-well-for-every-person" context.)

Even So

Anyway, even so, even though the main purpose of the site, the governing purpose, is to somehow facilitate a way to present logical types publicly, even so, there is some satisfaction to knowing that ten thousand people got their high level query directly answered, or at least, directly spoken to, in a most serious, and thorough manner.

It doesn't seem to be getting the "Logical Types and Logical Levels System" publicly presented, but even so, ten thousand queries directly answered, and hundreds more every month, ongoing, well it is a sort of fun thing to know.

I mean, once upon a time, I was a teacher.

Don't You Feel Sorry For Me Yet? Not Sorry Enough . . . That's What I Say . . .

But it also amazes me, in another way, that in the entire seven years, I have never received so much as one word of support, or even acknowledgment, from anyone, anywhere, nor one penny, in support of any aspect of this project. Slammed doors, 'go away', is the only definitive word I've ever gotten. Astounding, ain't it? Well, even though it's the single most typical, and certainly most thoroughly tragic pattern of my life, even so, even still, I find it amazing.

Oh well. Onward.

The Site Records

So anyway, following, are reprinted the records for the first one-thousand human visits in May, 2002, running from May 1st, to May 25th.

Again, search engines, and web-robots are not included in this list.

And each visit is printed only once in the entire list of 1,000 consecutive visits that follows, but I've broken the list up in several different ways, to perhaps make it a little easier to grasp as a whole.

Perhaps I should mention that the place names, the third column from the left are approximations just a casual guess from the IP codes in the logs.

First, The Closest Matches

First, of the total 1,000 visits in the first four weeks of May, there were 600 that came in with query records.

Of the 600 query records, there were 200 visitors who came to files that contained solid text materials that spoke directly to their query, either succinctly or voluminously.

In other words, 200 of the 600 query records showed the search to have come in reasonably directly on target at this site, finding unique, and relevant text material. This sort of hit constituted, about a third of the query results.

These were the 'bingo' type visits. I'm guessing that a high proportion of this particular group of visitors "got what they came for". Not all, of course, but a high proportion.

I've arranged them here according to the name of the file visited.

Second, The Full Citation Plus Contextual Material, Type of Visits

Second, is 150 more queries, out of the 600 query reports. In these cases, the visitor either got a full citation, accompanied by other works by the same author and similar works by others, or some reference that seemed to relate to what they were asking.

This sort of visit, seems to be "on the pathway" of what the person was looking for, rather than a find of full blown, unique, and directly relevant text material, as above.

Again, it's so hard to imagine what might've gone through the person's mind when they came upon the file really trying to imagine that, seems an awful lot like reading tea leaves.

Fourth, Appear to Have Missed The Mark

Fourth, these folks, again, 100 out of the 600 queries, appear to have been looking for something else, ie. Keith Richards the rock 'n roll star, rather than Keith Richards the child abuse caseworker, or Copernicus' childhood, rather than his discoveries, or the like.

With some of them though, it looks like the file may have turned out to be of interest anyway it's hard to tell . . .

My little share of the web-traffick

Then, we have this next group of visits.

If I had to really think about it, I'd have to admit that the possibility of this title serving as 'bait' of some sort, did occur to me. I mean, to be honest, it did cross my mind. But my gosh, how stark.

The file itself, 'Math China Girls' is a graphically presented, one-page Acrobat *.pdf bibliograpy, listing the five dozen or so books that I read between 1999 and 2001 an update for the Diamonds page, and for the 200 Favorite Books file.

It includes 'Religion and Child Abuse', by Philip Greven, 'E Equals MC sq.' by David Bodanis, 'It Takes a Village', by Hillary Rodham-Clinton, 'Shanghai', by Stella Dong, and 'Unwanted Sex', by Stephen Schulhofer, among others of the general genre.

I thought it was a pretty good title The High Level, which is mathematics ('Math' 6 books), Plus, The Medium Level, here shown as history and society ('China' 4 books), Plus, The Daily Life Level ('Girls' 9 books).

I mean, when it comes to what matters, well - math, china, girls - what else is there? Seemed a 'natch.

I did think of calling it "Math China Women Children", but the title I finally decided on, seemed to include just a little more, more briefly too.

Actually, to be honest, I did figure that that title might peak a certain interest, not like this though; I didn't figure that. Wow, you just say one teeny little thing, and, well, stand back . . .

Well, I suppose, it did wind up, bringing into one of my favorite bibliographies, a legitimate one-millionth of that sort of traffic, alongside everything else . . . and, I suppose, a little anti-trafficking research isn't going to hurt anyone . . .

Anyway, I've heard that formal trafficking sites get more hits per second, than I get per century, so now I'm getting a one-millionth, or a one-billionth cut of those site-visits too, which seems reasonable enough, I suppose . . .

Fifth, No Query Reported

And finally, this fifth group, 400 out of the 1,000; the site visits that came in without query records.

I presume these to be either returning visitors, or visitors via search services that don't send along records, or from just links, wherever out there, or from people to whom I've handed my card, or the men in black, or any number of other possible sources.

It sort of still fascinates me that they come in from all over the world, I mean, that's how it is with all the millions of sites on the web, but still . . .

I mean, no one I've ever met has ever heard of me, or seems to have even the vaguest clue as to what I'm up to; to everyone I've known, I'm just a bum in the street, to be shrugged off, or avoided. But a site like this makes you feel world famous . . . not really of course . . . just joking . . . but, just a teensy teensy little . . .

Anyway, for those without queries but with place names (15%, or one-in-seven of the total 1,000), I've arranged them moving eastwards, starting from Warsaw. I don't know why start with Poland exactly; maybe it's because my grandmother was Polish . . .

Sometimes I Wonder About These Next Ones.

Is it the men in black? Or is it space cadet network administrators? Or massive firewalls? Or just shrugs, like, it doesn't matter.

Or maybe visitors from another galaxy? That must be it . . . yeah . . . But anyway, I can't tell.

All I know is, that Mao, Neandertal, and especially, The Nature of Truth, seem to be popular with these folks. Hmmm . . . What does it mean?

Maybe I'd do better with regular tea leaves . . .

Day by Day The Last Week In May

Below, I thought I'd put in an additional week or so, that shows the day by day traffic, sorted in various ways.

It's not entirely representative, since this was the Memorial Day week, during which, alongside Labor Day and Christmas week, site traffic generally drops to one-half to two-thirds of usual. In this case the traffic was down about 25 percent, from earlier in the month.

The percentage of directly relevant queries (Blue) also drops substantially.

I suppose, I should take that to mean that a high proportion of my site traffic is work-related or school-related, rather than home or recreation-based web-roaming.

Or perhaps it means that people found the site at work or at school, showing the query, but are returning to another file linked on the page, from home, or on another day, resulting in a blank query field.

Wild guesses, alongside maybe wishful thinking. I just can't tell what is actually going on. For me, it's like reading tea leaves.

Monday, June 3 --- Sorted By Query --- current usual for Mondays: 50 this day to 5 pm: 38 (projected 50)

Key File

In doing a crude inventory of the site recently, I was a little surprised to find that there are 130 unique, content files at this site, about a hundred of them being accessed at least a few times a year, and seventy or eighty, at least once or twice a month. Included among these, are about 30 or 40 that are regularly accessed a few times a week or more.

I've looked over the list of them, and for now, am narrowing the current main group of 'primary files' down to these 52 (of the 130 total).

These are the files I want most to be seen, or, at least, this is the way it seems to me at this time.

It's not in order of how frequently the files are visited. 'Most Popular Files', over the years, have been, far and away, the main html Bibliography, and Flying Blind \('Mao and AI'\). Followed by, the Home Page, Truth, Autobiography, Neandertal, Beyond, What If, and a couple of others.

But this list here, seems a little more like, "The Point Now".
